

Amsterdam University of the Arts

You are reading the second newsletter about research projects within the Amsterdam University of the Arts. This time with a focus on the Day of the Research-teacher, recent publications and current research developments.

Day of the Research-teacher

Do you not only teach at one of the AHK-academies, but do you also do research? Then take part in the symposium 'The Day of the Research-teacher'. The first edition of this recurring event will take place on Thursday, November 5th, from 3:30 PM to 5:30 PM. Unfortunately it will not be on location this year, but there is an interesting online programme available for anyone who combines teaching and research.

Funny, weird, exciting, poetic: Wicked Arts Assignments

Looking for a new angle for your art lessons or your own art practice? You can find it in Wicked Arts Assignments, the latest book from the Arts Education research group. Almost a hundred unusual, inspiring, funny or socially involved art assignments are bundled in the book. The assignments connect with theater, visual art, music, design and dance: they reflect themes from these different disciplines, which makes us think differently about ourselves, art and the world.

In development: AHK Research Centre

The AHK Research Centre, which is currently being developed, provides better conditions for research. Activities are aimed at exchange, meeting and collaboration between students, researchers, teachers and artists. Diversity and an inclusive research and education climate are basic principles. In the course of 2021, the Research Center will be opened with a symposium in which teacher-research at the AHK will also be given a central place.
